

Military Communications Systems Engineer Job Specification

Job Title:	Military Communications Systems Engineer
Job Reference:	TSD.JSP.002
Location:	Welwyn Garden City (with potential work at customer sites)
Type of Role:	Our Company works in Satellite Communications Consultancy & Development. The Military Communications System Engineer will hold a technical role and be involved primarily in supporting our Military and Governmental customers with technical advice, hands-on technical support and operations expertise.
Key Objectives:	Professional consultancy support to e2E's clients in the area of satellite communications, tactical communications and communications systems management.
Responsibilities:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Provide systems engineering, technical analysis, operations advice and management support to customers on major military and civil communications programmes. • Providing support through all phases of system / product development, including requirements engineering, sub-contractor management, prototyping, integration and test, handover and transition to operations. • Working closely with the customer's in-house technical and management teams, on customer premises, either individually or as part of a small e2E support team. • Contributing to technical studies looking at future technologies and concepts of operation within the military environment. • To produce work efficiently and of high-quality according to e2E's standards and programme plans. • To provide task estimates and progress information to team leaders and the project manager.
Salary:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Circa £40-£45,000 dependent on experience plus benefits